building the moral community radical naturalism and emergence demonstrates how very simple models of moral engagements based on natural incomplete value laden frames of the world can lead to general moral progress for the human community all moral behavior affects more than one person which means that the moral community is more than the sum of the individuals included in it david w chambers argues that there is no ethically detached and superior position from which to operate and that such claims are focused on ethics not on acting morally therefore be cautious against mistaking theories of ethics composed on statements about what is good and right for actual moral behavior that moves broadly and inevitably toward a better world this book explores naturalistic ethics offering a modified classical analytic philosophy exploration of morality that is consistent with emerging thinking in psychology neurobiology game theory and self adjusting systems the possibility of moral community defends the claim that there could be a moral community a community of rational creatures somewhat like ourselves living together in ways informed and regulated by shared normative standards and understandings these creatures aim to live together in this way and expect each other to conform to that shared aim those who fail to do so are deemed to have acted wrongly and held responsible for doing so this possibility is not dependent on the truth of such large metaphysical claims as robust normative realism and libertarian free will and even if these large metaphysical claims are false moral community remains possible without those who compose it needing to commit any errors believe any fictions live any lies or be subject to any illusions there is nothing they need to make believe or to pretend this possibility is vindicated by developing and defending the view that our normative thought and talk expresses who we are or more exactly who we are when we are by our own lights at our best this is something shaped by our history our nature and the passions in our souls it is something contingent certainly but it is idle to be troubled by that if it is also something we are able to take ownership of and agree to inhabit together as a space of mutual normative expectation and responsibility is morality fixed objectively independently of all human judgment or do we invent right and wrong articulating the moral community argues that neither of these simple answers is correct its central thesis is that working within zones of objective indeterminacy the moral community the community of all persons has the authority to introduce new moral norms unlike political communities which are centralized non inclusive and backed by coercion the moral community is decentralized inclusive and not coercively backed this book explains in detail how its structure arises from efforts by individuals to work out intelligently with one another how to respond to morally important concerns developing a novel theory of dyadic rights and duties based on this phenomenon the book argues that conscientious efforts of this kind provide moral input authoritative only over the parties involved after sufficient uptake and reflective acceptance by the moral community however these innovations become new moral norms this account of the moral community's moral authority is motivated by and supports a type of normative ethical theory constructive ethical pragmatism which to use an unfashionable distinction defended in the book rejects the consequentialist claim that rightness is to be defined as a function of goodness and the deontological claim that principles of right stand fixed independently of the good it holds rather that what we ought to do depends on our continuing efforts to specify the right and the good in light of each other
